

A Few Mindful Media Resources
Compiled by Sarah Krongard, PhD

- Parenting for a Digital Future is a treasure trove of resources with a variety of relevant and research-driven pieces synthesizing work from the London School of Economics. Led by Dr. Sonia Livingstone. Highly recommend Livingstone's piece that informed the recent presentation: Policing Screen-Time to Weighing Screen-Use.
- Center for Media Literacy and their Five Key Concepts and Key Questions
- The Media Education Lab, led by Dr. Renee Hobbs
- The Connected Learning Alliance; provide a variety of reports and resources, such as the recent Reclaiming Digital Futures and Raising Good Gamers initiatives
- Foundations for Digital Life from the Harvard Graduate School of Education; recent piece from the lead researcher Dr. Carrie James and Dr. Emily Weinstein: We're all worried about teens and tech. HX might be the answer. in TechCrunch
- Algorithmic Justice League, led by Dr. Joy Buolamwini - examining the implications artificial intelligence
- The Representation Project, combating sexism in media
- The Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media
- Interesting piece on television consumption and empathy from Black and Barnes
- Check out the online asynchronous four-week workshop from Professional Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education: Screen-Time Savvy: Strategies to Deepen Digital and Media Literacy
